

How to Use Team Building for a Successful Merger or Acquisition

Is a merger or acquisition around the corner? Follow these tips on when to implement team building initiatives and what types of experiences you should consider for your team:

1. Pre-Merger

If possible, start team building activities during the pre-signing phase to ensure a positive cultural fit. This will also help build rapport and excite employees about the upcoming changes.

Host social activities that are informal, fun, and focused on building personal connections and reducing stress.

Plug and Play Mixer

Water Cooler

Mini Games

Taboo

Drink & Draw

2. Immediately After the Merger

There's lots to celebrate in the spirit of joining forces. Initiate a team building activity soon after the merger to align the teams and kick off a positive tone.

Use collaborative and recreational activities that encourage teammates to work together and try new things.

Confetti Pub

Mixology Class

Murder Mystery Party

Casino Night

Drag Queen Bingo

3. During the Integration Phase

Support ongoing collaboration and reinforce the new company culture. Ideally, events should be going on a team, departmental, AND company-wide level. Ideally, it should be in this order before considering cross-departmental initiatives.

Consider a mix of problem-solving activities that foster teamwork and innovative thinking and more collaborative experiences that spark a sense of shared purpose and build relationships across multiple company levels.

Team:

Escape Quest

Traitorous Trivia

Mean Queens Murder Mystery

Horse Racing

Couchella

4. Adjustment Phase

Naturally, new challenges will require the company to invest in solidifying team cohesion and commitment to the new vision and objectives ahead. It's important to continue to invest in culture to minimize the bumps.

Consider doing workshops, training sessions, and other more reflective sessions to allow employees to share their experiences and improve the integration process.
